About the job

The Project Management Apprenticeship is building pipeline for the next generation of Project Managers Analysts across the industry, actively bridging the gap between technical employment and education. You'll develop general project management skills (focusing on soft skills needed for effective change and risk management) as well as put an emphasis on agile project management and innovation. Within this knowledge you will equally gain a deep understanding of when to use these skills and how this translates to managing complex projects.

While at Google, you will have the opportunity to work alongside a team of Googlers to solve real life problems while developing and learning from world-class leaders. An external training partner will also support you during the program.

We will equip you with everything you need to know to make a meaningful impact as a Project Management apprentice at Google. You will be mentored and trained in a wide range of tools and techniques, distilling down data for actionable takeaways and making recommendations across different business groups. Your work will stand alongside that of other Googler project managers, making a real difference to users around the world.

Responsibilities

- Coordinate internal resources for flawless execution of projects.
 - Share relevant documentation and reports with project teams.
 - Provide information and regular support to stakeholders.
 - Develop in-depth understanding of project scope and particulars i.e. timeframes, financials, outcomes.
 - Ensure thorough project documentation, creating and reviewing reports.
